Participant Recommendations for Hosting Successful Stand-Downs

Make it interactive

- Engage workers in active participation to "drive the point home".
- Facilitate discussions, make time for question-and-answer sessions, create breakout groups, prioritize individual conversations, promote interaction between co-workers, and ask for feedback from employees about how to improve safety.

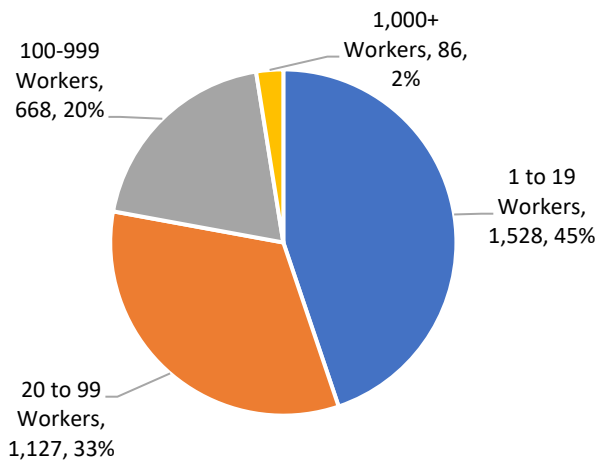

Make it personalized

- Highlight actual fall stories to help the risk of falls feel more real.
- Tailor content to specific jobsites and workers present by focusing on specific plans, hazards, and strategies for the work at hand.

In 2022, CPWR distributed close to 400,000 FREE hardhat stickers, available to order each year before the Stand-Down at stopconstructionfalls.com.

Top Stand-Down Activities

Forty-five percent of stand-downs held were for fewer than 20 workers. The most mentioned activities were trainings, meetings/huddles, toolbox talks, videos, and demonstrations. It was common for event organizers to describe combining multiple types of activities during their stand-downs, like hosting a training followed by providing refreshments and hardhat stickers.
